

Contributors

Yvette Ankrah was awarded at the Institute of Education, UCL. She researches second generation Ghanaians, belonging, identity, race and class. Outside of academia, she is a business coach and consultant supporting women in business. She was awarded an MBE in 2017 for her campaigning work in this field. Email: Yvette@yankrah.co.uk

Raquel Durán is a graphic recorder/scriber/visual facilitator based in UK. She has been working as a freelance visual facilitator since 2012, and her work includes documenting events at the University of Sussex, Borough Market and City Hall, London. Raquel has got the first award for short stories contest at Museo Thyssen Madrid in 2012. blog: <https://raquelcronopia.wordpress.com/>

Evgenia Iliadou (PhD student) Department of Social Policy and Criminology, The Open University (OU). My research is focusing on the refugee “crisis” and the intersectional forms of violence and social harm which border crossers experience en route to Europe. The case study of my research is Lesbos Island. My main research interests are around issues of borders, border harms, state violence and social harm. Email: evgenia.iliadou@open.ac.uk

Samar Maqusi: PhD Architectural Design, Bartlett School of Architecture, UCL. UN-RWA HQ-A. Samar is an architect and urban specialist with 10+ years of experience in international development, including urban planning and development in conflict areas. Samar recently obtained her PhD from the Bartlett School of Architecture in London. <http://samarmaqusi.com/> Contact: samarmaqusi@gmail.com

Sanja Vico was awarded a PHD and is an Associate Lecturer at the Department of Media and Communications, at Goldsmiths, University of London. Her research interests include social and mobile media, migration, identities, nationalism, cosmopolitanism, social class, gender, and media audiences. Email: s.vico@gold.ac.uk

Dami Makinde, Let Us Learn. Dami was born in Nigeria and brought to the UK when she was 8 years old. She joined Let Us Learn in February 2015 and told her story in the Guardian newspaper in the run up to the Tigere legal challenge. Dami now works full time on the campaign and coordinates the Let Us Learn campaign team. Contact: DamiMakinde@justforkidslaw.org

Boonyarit Daraphant, aka Bo Thai, is an artist, activist, and a senior at University of California, Irvine. He migrated to the US from Thailand at the age of 13 in 2009. He advocates for immigrant rights, and creates poetry and artwork inspired by surrealism, graffiti, Thai art, and folk art. Instagram @thebothai

Editors

Laura Henneke is a PhD student in Visual Sociology at Goldsmiths, University of London, researching the migration of transnational traders along the New Silk Road. She is co-founder of Present Spaces and an active member of Goldsmiths' Centre for Urban and Community Research. Email: l.henneke@gold.ac.uk

Vanessa Hughes is a PhD candidate in Sociology at Goldsmiths, University of London, researching undocumented young migrants' lives in London. She previously worked at COMPAS, Oxford University and published 'Citizenship and its Others' with Professor Bridget Anderson among others. Email: v.hughes@gold.ac.uk

Peter Rees is a PhD candidate in Politics at Goldsmiths, University of London. Working in the field of political theory, his research explores the relationship between citizenship and universal rights through an analysis of contemporary conditions of rightlessness experienced by irregular migrants. Email: p.rees@gold.ac.uk

Ignacio Rivera was awarded a PhD in Sociology by Goldsmiths, University of London. His research focuses on how diasporic, musical and political identities are performed, contested and reaffirmed in a festival of Latin American music and politics that takes place every two years in Machynlleth, Wales. Email: i.rivera@gold.ac.uk

Kaoru Takahashi was awarded a PhD in Sociology by Goldsmiths, University of London. Her research focuses on the gendered life trajectories and everyday experiences of Japanese migrant women in southeast London by using ethnographic approach. Email: ktaka002@gold.ac.uk

Sarah Walker is a PhD Candidate in Sociology, Goldsmiths, University of London. Her research examines the interaction between separated young people and migration regimes to explore the productive nature of borders. She has previously worked as a researcher including at COMPAS, University of Oxford, The University of Southampton and the Refugee Council. Email: swalk002@gold.ac.uk

Peer reviewers

Miranda Armstrong (PhD candidate in Sociology, Goldsmiths, University of London)

Danae Avgeri (PhD student at School of Geography, Queen Mary, University of London)

Dr. Dominika Blachnicka-Ciacek (PhD; Associate Lecturer, Goldsmiths, University of London, post-doctoral researcher, Department of Landscape, University of Sheffield and Teaching Fellow, SOAS)

Dr. Katherine Collins (Postdoctoral Researcher, Goldsmiths, University of London)

Dr. Gabriel Dattatreyan (Lecturer, Anthropology, Goldsmiths, University of London)

Daria Krivonos (PhD candidate in Sociology, University of Helsinki)

Chantelle Lewis (PhD student in Sociology, Goldsmiths, University of London)

Ashjan Lulu (PhD candidate in Sociology, Goldsmiths, University of London)

Dr. Angelo Martins (Associate Lecturer at Goldsmiths, University of London)

Dr. Louise Owusu-Kwarteng (Programme leader and senior lecturer, University of Greenwich University of Greenwich)